Reflection

Over the past week, I've been particularly impressed by the number of children making thoughtful and wise choices throughout the school day. Whether it's supporting a friend, showing resilience in their learning, or demonstrating responsibility around school, these moments—big and small—show how our pupils are growing not only academically, but also in maturity and judgement.

These skills will be especially important as we look ahead to Safer Internet Day next week.

I'm proud of the way our children continue to reflect on their actions, support one another, and rise to new challenges. I look forward to building on this as we explore safer online behaviour together over the coming days.
